Senator's wife readies for probation after guilty plea

Sentencing. Maygan Sensenberger pleads guilty to causing a disturbance on plane

Maygan Sensenberger, 23, and Manitoban Senator Rod Zimmer, 69, are entering a new chapter in their relationship — probation.

Sensenberger appeared in a Saskatoon courthouse Thursday morning where she pleaded guilty to causing a disturbance and was given a 12-month suspended sentence and probation. A second charge of uttering threats was withdrawn.

Sensenberger became the centre of attention across the country after being arrested for causing a disturbance on a flight to Saskatoon from Ottawa in late August, just days before the couple's first wedding anniversary.

Prosecutors told the court witnesses aboard the aircraft heard Sensenberger allegedly threatening to slit the throat of her husband.

Her lawyer, Leslie Sullivan, said her client was happy the ordeal was settled.

"My client is extremely relieved this matter is over," said Sullivan. "She has been anxious to get this concluded and she just wants to return to her home and get back on with her life."

When asked if she was pleased with the sentencing, Sullivan explained, "I'm very pleased the charge was withdrawn — as it should have been ... We wanted to deal with it expeditiously and that's what we did."

The court was told that Sensenberger had been drinking at the time of the argument, and provincial judge Marilyn Gray said she felt if alcohol hadn't been involved, it would have been a different situation. She noted that a person's good judgment sometimes goes "out the window" when drinking.

Although there was no mandatory treatment as part of the sentence, Sensenberger will have to undergo any addictions assessment, treatment or counselling that is recommended by her probation officer.

Officials look into E. coli infection cases

Health officials in Alberta say they are investigating five cases of E. coli infections in people, but they are not linking them to an extensive recall of ground beef from major Canadian grocery stores.

Alberta Health Services says four of the infections are in Edmonton and one is in Calgary.

CTV is reporting that a four-year-old Calgary girl has been in Alberta Children's Hospital since Sept. 11.

The report says Sarah Demoskoff's kidneys have failed and she has had two blood transfusions.

The girl's family says doctors told them the case was linked to a beef recall announced on Monday. The family said Sarah ate prepackaged ground beef patties and became very sick soon after.

Alberta Health Services will not confirm if she is one of the cases they are looking into.

Alberta investigates between 20 and 25 cases of E. coli each year.

The Public Health Agency of Canada says it is not aware of any E. coli cases related to the recall, but it is monitoring the situation.

The Canadian Food Inspection Agency first warned on Sunday that ground beef from Edmonton-based XL Foods may contain E. coli. Since then, the list of stores the products were sold in has been expanded several times.

"This is ground beef and the ground beef is sold originally in large containers — tubs or larger type of containers — and they go out to retail outlets and various distributors," said the agency's Garfield Balsom.

iPhone 5 arrives to a lukewarm crowd

Too expensive. Some customers say the online price tag of $699 is overpriced

With today being the availability date of Apple's iPhone 5 in Canada, excitement is in the air, but not everyone is chomping for a piece of Apple's latest and greatest.

Currently available for order on Apple.com for $699, Regina resident James Noll thinks that's a little steep.

"The last iPhone is still new, a couple years old. Cell phone contracts are longer than that," he said.

"And it's way too pricy anyway."

Albert McLeod, agrees the iPhone 5 is expensive, but he's not interested for another reason.

"To me a cellphone is a just cellphone. (It is) the only thing I use it for," he said outside The Diner restaurant in downtown Regina.

Calls to the iWorld store at the Cornwall Centre inquiring about iPhone 5 availability were not returned by deadline.

Trying to avoid a strike. Cancer agency, SAHO keep discussions going

Representatives from the Saskatchewan Association of Health Organizations (SAHO) and Saskatchewan Cancer Agency met in Regina this week to try to avoid strike action.

While Regina meetings wrapped up Thursday, a Saskatchewan Government and General Employee's Union (SGEU) spokesperson says discussions are ongoing.

"We are continuing to work towards a resolution and are agreeing to meet as needed," said Susan Dusel with the SGEU.

Bernie Young, vice president of labour relations for SAHO, told Metro Regina Thursday no negotiations are scheduled for next week. Earlier this year, Saskatchewan Cancer Agency members rejected an offer from SAHO, with 78 per cent of workers voting to reject the offer.

Seniors. Region takes responsibility for rushing residents out of facility

The Saskatoon Health Region says it is taking full responsibility for only giving residents of a seniors home in Humboldt eight days to move out.

Health region president Maura Davies says in hindsight they should have given the seniors who lived at St. Mary's Villa more time to prepare for the February move.

Her comments followed a report by Saskatchewan's Ombudsman which said the 10 seniors, with an average age of 89, were treated unfairly.

American war resister turns herself over to U.S. authorities

Seeking refuge. Soldier living in Toronto came to Canada in 2007 to avoid service

An American soldier who sought refuge in Canada after she became disillusioned with the Iraq war has turned herself over to the United States.

The War Resisters Support Campaign says Kimberly Rivera was immediately arrested, detained and transferred to U.S. military custody after presenting herself at the border.

The group says Rivera is now waiting to be transferred to a different military facility where she faces punishment for being absent from her unit.

It also says Rivera's husband and her four children crossed the border separately so the kids wouldn't have to see their mother being detained.

The secretary to Immigration Minister Jason Kenney has confirmed the deportation and says the Harper government doesn't believe Rivera will be persecuted in the U.S.

Rivera, who lived in Toronto with her family, came to Canada in 2007 to avoid further U.S. military service.

Ken Marciniec of the War Resisters Support Campaign says two other Iraq war resisters who were deported in the past faced year-long jail sentences for desertion.

Rivera told reporters last month that her biggest fear about being deported was being separated from her young children, and having to sit in a prison, for being against the Iraqi conflict. THE CANADIAN PRESS

Roughly 19,000 people signed an online petition protesting her deportation order and rallies were held in Canadian cities Wednesday calling on the government to let Rivera stay in the country.

PQ 'bothered' by accused shooter's media access

The Quebec government is examining how accused killer Richard Henry Bain was able to speak to the media from a detention centre.

The Parti Québécois' new public security minister says he's bothered that the man accused of shooting two people at a PQ victory rally on election night had access to a radio audience.

Bain called a Montreal station on Wednesday and small snippets of a 38-minute interview were aired on English- and French-language stations of the Astral Radio network.

The accused shooter reportedly told the network he'd had a vision from God that Montreal should become its own province and separate from Quebec. He did not want to talk about events on election night — just about his political views.

On his way into Thursday's cabinet meeting, Public Security Minister Stephane Bergeron said he will investigate whether a prisoner should have access to a phone in order to transmit messages through the mass media.

"It seems worrisome to me," Bergeron said. "I'll look into it and get back to you.

"The question is whether a prisoner should have access to that type of platform to express himself in the public arena."

Radio station CJAD said Bain called from the infirmary of his Montreal detention centre. THE CANADIAN PRESS

Pussy riot. Band member's husband seeking U.S. human rights sanctions

The husband of one of the imprisoned members of the Russian punk rock band Pussy Riot wants U.S. sanctions against Russian officials involved in prosecuting the musicians.

Petya Verzilov was meeting on Thursday with U.S. lawmakers and aides involved in drafting legislation that would target Russian officials linked to human rights abuses. Verzilov is married to band member Nadia Tolokonnikova.

The punk band members were sentenced in August to two years in prison for performing an irreverent song mocking Russian President Vladimir Putin inside Moscow's main cathedral.

Verzilov hopes the legislation could be used to pressure Russian officials to release his wife and others.

"They are greatly afraid of having their bank accounts shut off," he said. THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

War-zone birth comes as surprise to servicewoman

Baby conceived before tour of duty. British soldier stationed in Afghanistan unlikely to face censure

Hours after a British soldier in Afghanistan told medics she was suffering from stomach pains, the Royal Artillery gunner unexpectedly gave birth to a boy — the first child ever born in combat to a member of Britain's armed forces.

Britain's defence ministry said Thursday the soldier told authorities she had not been aware she was pregnant and only consulted doctors on the day that she went into labour.

The soldier, who arrived in Afghanistan in March, delivered the child Tuesday at Camp Bastion, the vast desert camp in southern Afghanistan's Helmand province where Prince Harry is deployed and a Taliban attack last week killed two U.S. Marines.

"Mother and baby are both in a stable condition in the hospital and are receiving the best possible care," the ministry said in a statement. It said a team of doctors would fly out to Afghanistan in the coming days to help the soldier and her son return safely to Britain.

The U.K. does not allow female soldiers to deploy on operation if they are pregnant. Although the soldier's child was conceived before her tour of duty began in March, she is not likely to face censure.

Britain has previously sent female soldiers home from wars after they have fallen pregnant — including about 60 from Afghanistan, but hasn't previously had a servicewoman go into labour in a war zone.

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

Giving pregnant pause

- Maj. Charles Heyman, a retired officer and author of The British Army Guide said the unexpected birth would cause some concern at the base.
- "This sort of thing makes life difficult for everyone else, but the important thing is the welfare of the female soldier. This could have gone wrong and we don't know if the attack on Camp Bastion might have forced the birth," said Heyman.
- Heyman said it may have been "that the excitement of the tour masked the symptoms of the pregnancy."

Birth control. Implants, IUDs urged for teen girls

Teenage girls may prefer the pill, the patch or even wishful thinking, but their doctors should be recommending IUDs or hormonal implants — long-lasting and more effective birth control that you don't have to remember to use every time, the leading U.S. gynecologists' group said Thursday.

The IUD and implants are safe and nearly 100 per cent effective at preventing pregnancy, and should be "first-line recommendations," the American College of Obstetricians and Gynecologists said in updating its guidance for teens.

Both types of contraception are more invasive than the pill, requiring a doctor to put them in place. That, and cost, are probably why the pill is still the most popular form of contraception in the U.S.

But birth-control pills often must be taken at the very same time every day to be most potent. And forgetting to take even one can lead to pregnancy, which is why the pill is sometimes only 91 per cent effective. THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

Need-to-know

- An IUD is a small piece of plastic inserted in the uterus that can prevent pregnancy for up to 10 years. An implant is a matchstick-size plastic rod that releases hormones. It is placed under the skin of the upper arm and usually lasts three years.

PQ makes good on vow to scrap tuition-fee increase

Quebec. Decision comes after 'Maple Spring' that saw student protests erupt across province

The tuition increase that triggered such social strife in Quebec was cancelled Thursday during an action-packed first full day in office for the Parti Québécois government.

The new government repealed the fee hike, by decree, in its first cabinet meeting less than 24 hours after coming to power.

Student leaders cheered the news.

Premier Pauline Marois has acted on a promise that she had made during the election campaign. She announced the decision at a news conference after the cabinet meeting.

Marois said tuition will go back to $2,168 — the lowest in Canada. With the planned increases, it would have been $600 higher this year and would have kept growing each year.

Marois said she will not decrease funding for universities and will make good on a promise to hold a summit on how to fund universities within her first 100 days as premier.

The government policy entering that meeting will be to suggest indexing future fee increases to the rate of inflation.

That would raise tuition by a rate of around one to three per cent most years — compared with the 84 per cent increase over seven years planned by the previous Charest government.

But Marois' inflation-index policy is not set in stone. Some students are pushing for zero tuition, as exists in some other countries. THE CANADIAN PRESS

Takeover. Nexen shareholders support deal with Chinese firm

The head of Nexen Inc. pitched the benefits of a takeover by a Chinese company Thursday even as the Calgary-based oil and gas company's shareholders overwhelmingly voted to support the politically charged deal.

Still faced with the task of winning approval from the federal government, interim chief executive Kevin Reinhart said the takeover wasn't the end for Nexen — which is active in Alberta's oilsands, the North Sea and elsewhere.

Reinhart said China National Offshore Oil Company will keep the Nexen name and expand the role of the company's Calgary headquarters to manage not just Nexen's assets, but also some $8 billion of the Chinese company's other assets in North and Central America.

Air Canada prepares for hiring spree

1,100 jobs available. Positions include flight attendants, customer service agents and baggage handlers

Job postings

- Air Canada says information on the job postings can be found at aircanada.com/careers, adding that applications can be filled out online.

Air Canada says it will hire about 1,100 employees across a number of fields, including 200 at its new low-cost carrier.

The airline said Thursday the jobs are part of its strategy to "seize new commercial opportunities, enhance customer service and renew our workforce."

Air Canada says it will hire about 400 flight attendants and some 500 airport customer service agents and baggage handlers. Sixty customer service agents will be hired for call centres in Montreal and Toronto.

"This recruitment program is consistent with our focus on controlling costs to become more competitive in our various markets," said president and CEO Calin Rovinescu. "At a time when youth unemployment is nearly 15 per cent in Canada, we are pleased to offer exciting career opportunities that will especially appeal to young people."

In addition to the hires at the main airline, the company will hire about 150 flight attendants and 50 pilots for its low-cost airline, slated to launch in 2013.

TAKING A BIG GULP OUT OF THE BIG APPLE

THE LIST
Paul Sullivan
metronews.ca

It's time again for the Metro List, your one-stop shop for conversational tidbits that make you the coolest cat around the cooler.

1 Hockey Night in Canada — NOT. The billionaire owners have locked out the millionaire players, cancelled the pre-season and could cancel the entire season. The rest of us may have to turn to football or soccer … or get a life.

2 The topless Duchess. Variation on that Hans Christian Andersen tale The Emperor's New Clothes. Only in this remake the paparazzi invade the Duchess of Cambridge's privacy and her husband the Duke is not even a little amused.

3 Cross-border crossover. Top U.S. retailer Nordstrom brings its shopping experience to Canada, announcing stores in Vancouver, Calgary, Toronto and Montreal. Hopefully, the Competition Bureau won't make the chain lower the quality of its service and jack up the prices so Canadian retailers can compete.

4 As of Friday, your device is obsolete. Apple starts selling the iPhone 5 in Canada on Friday. For $699 you get a phone that's half an inch longer. Doesn't seem like much, but don't tell the two million people who pre-ordered it in the U.S. I guess size still matters.

5 Speaking of size. As of this week, the mayor of N.Y.C. bans any big sugary drink over 16 ounces. Big Gulp banned in the Big Apple, and it's not even Boston. Start spreadin' the news.

6 Then there's Tupelo Honey. Turns out Mississippi is the fattest place in North America, with 34.9 per cent of its citizens considered obese. That's nuthin'. By 2030, after another 18 years of BBQ, 66.7 per cent of adults in the Hospitality State will be obese. I wouldn't get too smug; an estimated 1.6 million Canadian kids are overweight, and the Big Gulp is still freely available on any street corner.

7 This kid's not all right. Consider the case of Maygan Sensenberger, the wife of Sen. Rod Zimmer. She's 23, barely an adult; he's 69, barely sentient. At least, you have to wonder why else he'd marry someone 46 years his junior. Whatever, the honeymoon's over: Thursday, she pleaded guilty to causing a disturbance last month on a Saskatoon-bound flight, while a charge of threatening her husband was withdrawn. Maybe she wanted to go to Miami.

8 Voyager has left the building. In fact, Voyager 1, which was launched from Cape Canaveral 35 years ago, has left the whole damn solar system, the first human-made device to go into deep space, where no one has gone before. Literally. If aliens ever do intercept the Voyager and listen to the music included on board, they'll have to try to figure out a species that listens to Mozart, Stravinsky … and Blind Willie Johnson.

Public-art installation

Whole new world for Columbus

A renowned statue of Christopher Columbus in New York City has its own apartment after it was erected on scaffolding in an art installation by Japanese artist Tatzu Nishi.

The 75-square-metre "living room," complete with sofa, television and coffee table, has been temporarily built around the monument. METRO

Artist's viewpoint

"Obviously, until now, he was up there by himself, alone. So we want to change it into something really homey, warm, domestic-feeling."

Japanese conceptual artist Tatzu Nishi
For 15 years, Nishi has been installing domestic environments around public monuments.

Artwork in detail

- Meaning. "A big point of my work is to change this high level (of the statue) to the same level and you see the sculpture really differently," Nishi told reporters.
- It's upstairs. Installation is accessible via a staircase.
- No more feathers. "After 120 years with only pigeons for company, Columbus is finally getting a taste of the American dream," Public Art Fund's director Nicholas Baume said.

Jake Gyllenhaal stars in End of Watch. HANDOUT

Reel Guys

RICHARD CROUSE AND MARK BRESLIN

Make sure you pack Gravol for this 'watch'

Hand-held action. End of Watch pays homage to gritty crime dramas, but the shaky camera work gives it an artificial feel

Richard: Mark, End of Watch is all build up. The movie spends an hour-and-a-half introducing its characters, giving us a slice of LAPD life before topping it off with an exciting conclusion. I could have used less Barf-O-Matic hand-held camera work — sometimes it's hard to tell what's happening — but overall I thought this movie worked because of the naturalistic performances and the climax. You?

Mark: And what performances! Both Jake Gyllenhaal and Michael Peña are first-rate, their naturalistic style perfectly matching the you-are-there hand-held camera work. But I also thought the dialogue was far superior to most police thrillers. There's no plot, really — it's a series of episodes in the lives of two LAPD officers, which at times seemed reminiscent of the old TV series Adam 12. But there are things that are shown in this movie that would never have happened in the more benign TV show.

RC: It's true. It took me a while to warm to the episodic nature of the "story." I found the first half-hour stagey. The having-the-character-film-part-of-the-movie thing has been done to death, and I thought added a level of artificiality that didn't need to be there. Take that out and no one would miss it. But once I allowed myself to be drawn into the performances and the chemistry of the leads, I was sucked in. I thought the female characters were given more to do than usual in a cop drama, but just barely. Anna Kendrick is so talented, I would have liked to seen her given more to do.

MB: Kendrick barely registered for me; the woman who did was the Hispanic gang leader's significant other. Scary! As far as the ending goes, I thought it was a well-handled climax, but I can't say I didn't see it coming. It's the coda after the climax I thought was unnecessary. It tried to add poignancy to a movie that was thankfully unsentimental throughout.

RC: I agree. It's hard to discuss the end without being spoilerific, but let's say the movie goes from jovial to gritty and then back to jovial again. I didn't love it, but Hollywood seems to be allergic to tragic endings.

MB: Felt like a studio decision and a focus group to me, Richard. But I enjoyed the film anyway. Just remember that much of it is shot shaky style, so sit at the back of the theatre and bring your Gravol!

Synopsis

Jake Gyllenhaal and Michael Peña play officers Taylor and Zavala, patrol cops in Los Angeles's tough South Central neighbourhood. A routine traffic stop turns into something bigger when they confiscate money and guns from a cartel member. "Be careful," they're warned by a senior officer, "You just tugged on the tail of a snake that's going to turn around and bite you."

Slap-sticked together by Halifax comedy troupe Picnicface, Roller Town is the little indie comedy that could. Not only was it made on a skate-string budget, but the gang decided to spoof the arcane fad of '70s roller-rink films (remember Xanadu?). With plenty of silly gags whirling around a bare plot about a skate king who seeks justice against mobsters trying to kill disco, Roller Town stands out — even if it does lose its wheels by the end.

The hard-edged British future-shock comic book (previously adapted with Sly Stallone as a camp-fest in 1995) becomes a hard-core feature courtesy of writer Alex Garland (28 Days Later) and director Pete Travis. Dredd 3D is not for the faint of heart, filled as it is with endless skinning, stabbing, shooting and head crushing all rendered in some beautifully designed 3D sequences. Spare on dialogue, long on style, pulsing music and violence, Dredd 3D is a gift to serious sci-fi action movie fans.

Trouble with the Curve is no Moneyball. If anything, it's the antithesis to the acclaimed biopic about using science to shape ball teams. In this, Clint Eastwood is an expired scout that, despite failing eyes and curmudgeonly demeanor, picks players the old-fashioned way — on personality. Too bad there wasn't more personality in the film itself as text-book characters and routine plotting leaves Curve with a sub-par batting average.

House at the End of the Street is notable as actress Jennifer Lawrence's first big screen appearance since her turn in The Hunger Games. Marketed as a supernatural spook show for kids, the film is actually a rock solid, dark and suspenseful thriller armed with further evidence of just how good an actress Lawrence is becoming. Although saddled with a youth friendly PG-13 rating and light on anything visceral, House is actually ample frightening and even disturbing.

Television. Elementary creator and stars break down their characters

AMBER RAY
Metro World News

In the new Global drama Elementary, eccentric detective Sherlock Holmes surfaces in New York City after a stint in rehab. He is forced to accept the aid of a sober companion, Dr. Joan Watson, to help in his recovery, though he believes his best shot at redemption is through helping his pal in the NYPD solve the city's toughest cases. Meet the modern incarnations of Sir Arthur Conan Doyle's crime solvers.

Sherlock Holmes, played by Jonny Lee Miller

His past

"Oh, yeah — he's definitely got mental issues," Miller says. "I wouldn't say a mental illness or anything like that, but he's got issues, personal issues."

Series creator Rob Doherty teases that "something terrible happened to (Sherlock) in London. He spiralled out of control. Our Sherlock has emerged with what I think is at his core just a tiny kernel of self doubt where one previously never existed."

Miller — whose own tattoos are visible in character — says that inner turmoil is what makes the brilliant, yet socially inept, Sherlock relatable.

"He struggles with his own sense of self," Miller says. "People can identify with that."

The present

Whereas some incarnations of Sherlock may have been considered sociopathic, the detective in Elementary isn't simply seeking the thrill of the chase when he takes on a new case.

"Our Sherlock is a puzzle solver," says Doherty. "I see him as someone who is driven … to do the right thing, to help people. At the end of the day, he believes in justice. It's not just about putting bad guys behind bars. Helping people and doing the right thing are factors that play into it as well."

Lucy Liu stars alongside Jonny Lee Miller in Elementary. HANDOUT

His future

If there is one foe that defines Sherlock, it's Moriarty. Doherty promises the detective's nemesis will factor into the series, but is reluctant to give away too many details.

"He was such a shadowy figure," Doherty says. "I think he was described as the spider at the centre of the web of crime in London. He's the man behind the man behind the man. In other words, there are a few dominos we knock over before we ultimately get to him."

Dr. Joan Watson Played by Lucy Liu

Her past

Though Watson may not act out like the abrasive, dysfunctional Sherlock, the doctor may be just as damaged as her charge.

"She was a surgeon and lost her licence, which gives her sort of a dark past that we still don't know about (in the pilot), and we may not discover for a little while," Liu says. "What we want to do is introduce the audience to the characters, and then sort of slowly unravel a little bit about her personal history."

The present

Watson's obligations to Sherlock are professional — keep him sober and safe — until she realizes she's not such a bad private investigator herself.

"(Watson) is on the sideline (in the pilot), observing him, because she's his sober companion," Liu says.

"So she's not engaged in the mystery. She's engaged in him, and from that point on, then you get to see how that sort of blossoms out."

Her future

With a female Watson as Sherlock's sidekick, is a hookup imminent? Going back to the source material, Liu notes Sherlock's "awkward relationship with the other gender." Making his trusted companion a woman, she says, "is a constant reminder of that awkwardness and that division between being a friend," or something more. Miller insists the friendship is core to Elementary, just as it has been in all other takes on crime fighting duo. But sexual tension, he admits, is inevitable.

"There is that element, and people are going to wonder," he says. "But then wondering and asking questions is something that you really want your audience to do, isn't it?"

Stars share their Emmy-day RXs

Attending the Emmy Awards as a nominee is the kind of heady experience that sends even veteran actors' and show-runners' tummies aflutter. But, of course, the show must go on. Stars say they turn to booze, tunes and deep breaths to prepare for such moments. Here's what some of this year's nominees would prescribe for a case of Emmy-day nerves on Sunday.

"Actors, the thing is, we're used to getting nervous. That's sort of our thing. You get nervous and you know how to get through it. Otherwise, we wouldn't be able to go on stage or shoot.... I would say if I'm nervous, I would just drink a glass of water and take a deep breath."

Max Greenfield, New Girl

"A case of presence. Yes. Not 'presents.' Presence. Yes, we want to bring ourselves into the present moment and say, 'Hey! Look at this. Look what's happening. Let's be grateful for this moment and take it all in.' You know what I mean?"

Guest-star dream roles

While these stars have earned repeat Emmy nods for their regular gigs, that doesn't mean they don't have their eye on some sweet guest-star work. Producers, take note: Here's a look at the shows these nominees would love to try.

A devil of a deal

Finding the perfect Manhattan rental is about as easy as making your wildest dreams come true. Residents at The Drake get both — for a price — on 666 Park Avenue, which premieres Sunday, Sept. 30, on Citytv

AMBER RAY
Metro World News in New York

Tenants at The Drake really need to start paying more attention to the fine print on their leases. Sure, the address is great, but signing away your soul is a commitment that's difficult to negotiate your way out of on ABC's new supernatural drama, 666 Park Avenue.

The Drake owner Gavin Doran and his wife, Olivia, take special interest in the aspirations of their tenants, particularly those of new building managers Henry Martin and his girlfriend, Jane Van Veen. Before evil forces evict them, meet the new neighbours.

Gavin Doran, owner of The Drake

Is Gavin a representation of the devil? Terry O'Quinn has an interesting take on his self-interested, wicked character. "My theory is that Gavin's kind of a sharecropper on the plantation of evil," the actor says. "He plants the seeds. He only gets half the harvest. He has to feed some back to the building, but he gets his share and he uses people to his own ends." As for the existence of evil in the real world and people's abilities to indulge in deplorable behavior, O'Quinn — who has played his share of bad guys onscreen — believes "it's in (the human) colour wheel. Just depends on how strong it is in yours."

Olivia Doran, wife of Gavin

When Vanessa Williams first read the 666 Park Avenue script, she immediately likened the wealthy real estate icon Gavin to notorious Ponzi schemer Bernie Madoff. "(The Madoffs) had incredible land holdings all over that people knew about and they had a great amount of wealth. And then we all saw the dark side." As for the well-appointed Olivia, Williams says she views her character as "kind of like a mafia wife, where (Gavin) has supreme power. She is aware of a lot of things that happen that are unfortunate. She doesn't know everything in all the details, but she is aware of the makings of what goes on at The Drake."

Henry Martin, The Drake co-manager

Freshly transplanted from the Midwest, Henry and Jane's eagerness for the promise of New York City may be their downfall. "There's a reason why they moved to New York, and that's their ambition," Dave Annable says. "And I think that Henry and Gavin, their storylines will intertwine. Gavin takes Henry under his wing. I'm very curious to see how that's going to affect Henry and Jane's relationship over the course of the season."

Jane Van Veen, The Drake co-manager

New to New York herself, Rachael Taylor relates to the allure of The Drake. "I just looked for an apartment in New York City and it was really distressing," she admits. As for what happens after Jane and Henry move in, Taylor says the show strives to keep all of the scary supernatural stuff as grounded as possible. "If you have an instinct that something is a little bit creepy-deepy, you will rationally try and resist that as long as you can, because no one wants to really believe that there's a ghost in their basement," she says.

Which sitcom is for you?

Fall TV. Television is crowded with comedy this fall. Thanks to our handy flowchart, DVR overload is a thing of the past. To start, choose whether you prefer the company of friends or family

AMBER RAY
Metro World News in New York

Go On
Matthew Perry stars as a recently widowed sportscaster who finds wacky but loving new friends in a grief support group. Now airing Wednesdays on Global.

The New Normal
Every family has a little crazy in it. The loose screw comes in the form of a bigoted grandma (Ellen Barkin) in this sitcom. A committed gay couple (Andrew Rannells and Justin Bartha) hiring a single mom (Georgia King) to carry their child may seem untraditional, but their situation is full of love (and some bitingly funny moments) regardless. Airs Tuesday on CTV.

Ben and Kate
Slacker Ben (Nat Faxon) and frazzled single mom Kate (Dakota Johnson) are odd couple/best friend siblings who become roommates when perennial couch surfer Ben moves in for good. Their affectionately antagonistic relationship will ring true if you grew up close to a brother or sister you also wanted to strangle. Premieres Tuesday, Citytv.

New Girl
As Jess' (Zoe Deschanel) "adorkable" factor was toned down and focus was put on her friendship with her male roommates (Max Greenfield, Jake Johnson and Lamorne Morris, who proved just as capable playing goofy as their female counterpart), New Girl grew to become last season's best buddy comedy — complete with a drinking game, True American. Premieres Tuesday, Citytv.

The Mindy Project
The reasons we fell in love with New Girl apply here — Mindy (Mindy Kaling), an OBGYN who doesn't look like she's moonlighting as a runway model, is successful in her professional life but a total failure when it comes to love. A vet of The Office, Kaling brings optimism to the most cynical comedy — the New York City dating scene — even if she does resort to taking advice from a toy. Premieres Tuesday, Citytv.

Raising Hope
The Chance family (Cloris Leachman, Martha Plimpton, Garret Dillahunt, Lucas Neff) thrives on chaos. Though the show often hits on white-trash humour, what the family lacks in funds — or smarts — they make up for in heart. Premieres Oct. 2, Citytv.

Don't Trust the B---- in Apartment 23
If it weren't for con artist Chloe's (Krysten Ritter) loyalty to equally egotistic pal James Van Der Beek (playing a heightened version of himself) or admiration for new roomie June (Dreama Walker) who lost her big-time NYC gig but won't let the city get her down, Chloe really would be a queen B. Premieres Oct. 22, Citytv.

If you prefer to hang out with friends...

McLachlan trying for more positive songs

Canadian singer. Known for her sad, emotional ballads, the local star says she is now going for something upbeat

Canadian singer Sarah McLachlan is penning songs for her next album. DARRYL DYCK/THE CANADIAN PRESS

After releasing perhaps her saddest album yet, Sarah McLachlan says she's trying to write more upbeat material.

The three-time Grammy winner says she's penned five songs for her next disc but plans to devote more time to new material beginning in late fall, with the tentative aim of releasing a new album in 2013.

That release date might sound optimistic for the methodical McLachlan – but that's right in line with the way she's tried to view the world of late.

"I'm really working on being more positive," the friendly 44-year-old said in a recent interview from Vancouver, where she lives.

"(I'm trying) to think about what it is you want in your life, and then putting it out there, and then trying to sort of not look back.

"And that's been tricky, because in my writing, that's what I do. I look back. I reflect. And I'm really trying to be more forward-thinking in my writing."

McLachlan's effort to let a little more light into her songwriting comes after arguably her bleakest album yet, 2010's Laws of Illusion.

That sad, lovelorn record was released two years after McLachlan split with drummer Ashwin Sood, her husband of 11 years with whom she shares two daughters. The album, which opened at No. 2 on the Canadian chart, found McLachlan probing the remains of her relationship and trying to move forward.

"I went through some (crap)," she says now with a laugh as she casts her mind back to that period.

"There was a lot of real heartfelt stuff on there. But you know, there is on every record. And I think they are all sort of postcards of where I am emotionally. And my outlook is really very positive, and I'm ever hopeful. So I'm really trying to figure out a way to interject more of that into the music.

"I don't know if I'll succeed."

Talking about her new album.

And yet she knows that if she gets too upbeat, fans who flock to her fluttering vocals for a dose of harmonious heartbreak could be, well, heartbroken.

"Yeah, like: 'Oh my God, she's gone on Prozac,"' said McLachlan, who had to cancel a performance at Toronto's Massey Hall on Thursday. "Believe me, there's still going to be some good gutwrenchers. Because that's my happy place."

The Building a Mystery songwriter will also be feted this weekend when she receives a star on the Canada's Walk of Fame alongside fellow inductees Randy Bachman, former CFLer Russ Jackson and late funnyman Phil Hartman. THE CANADIAN PRESS

Justin Timberlake. Star says he struggles to turn out new music

He brought SexyBack, but don't quite wait for Justin Timberlake to bring his music back — just yet.

The singing superstar said his music making process is fueled by life's experiences and making an album "is a really big deal."

"For me, personally, when I do sit down and decide to do it, it's just a special thing," he said in an interview Wednesday night.

Timberlake is engaged to actress Jessica Biel.

He's appeared in a ton of movies in recent years, from The Social Network to Friends With Benefits.

This week he's in Trouble With the Curve, alongside Clint Eastwood and Amy Adams.

His last album was 2006's FutureSex/LoveSounds, a Grammy-winning record that launched three No. 1 hits and sold more than four million units in the United States. He's appeared on songs by other musicians but has not released his own music since.

The 31-year-old said he's unlike today's artists, who constantly drop albums and singles.

"I don't know that I can pump them out every year," he said.

Shakira's hips didn't lie

After months of speculation, Shakira has confirmed that she's pregnant.

"As some of you may know, (boyfriend) Gerard (Pique) and I are very happy awaiting the arrival of our first baby," the singer posted on her website.

"At this time we have decided to give priority to this unique moment in our lives and postpone all the promotional activities planned over the next few days." Shakira was scheduled to perform at the IheartRadio-Festival this weekend in Las Vegas, but she's cancelled the appearance.

Katie Holmes' split from Tom Cruise has not been easy on her six-year-old daughter, Suri, a friend of the actress tells Us Weekly.

"She said the divorce has been hard on Suri and she's acting out," the source says, adding that Holmes is determined to not indulge the girl's every wish just to appease her.

"Katie says no to some things, but gives a little leeway. She knows Tom is going to spoil her."

Amanda Bynes takes on drunk driving rumours

THE WORD
Dorothy Robinson
scene@metronews.ca

Amanda Bynes may be making headlines regularly for her troubles behind the wheel and her increasingly erratic behaviour, but the actress herself is "doing amazing," she tells People magazine during a phone call this week.

"I am retired as an actor. I am moving to New York to launch my career. I am going to do a fashion line," she says.

"I am not talking about being arrested for DUI because I don't drink, and I don't drink and drive. It is all false."

But while the former Nickelodeon star herself may think everything's fine, her nearest and dearest aren't so confident.

"People around Amanda are really concerned about her," a source tells the magazine. "She tells people she doesn't party or drink. She doesn't realize she has a problem."

And her behaviour is getting even weirder.

On Tuesday night, she was kicked out of a spin class at her L.A. gym, per TMZ.

Apparently, the class had started but Bynes stopped cycling and started wandering around the class. Once she found another bike, she hopped aboard but then took off her shirt, revealing a "tiny black strapless push up bra ... not a sports bra," says a witness.

She cycled a bit more and then stopped to apply make-up for a full 10 minutes before the instructor threw her out.

This is sad. All of these stories on Bynes' increasingly weird behaviour reminds me of Brittany Murphy — and we all know how that turned out.

Dax Shepard

Dax Shepard admits his wild past was a bit much for fiancée Kristen Bell when they first met.

"All the things I'd done were terrifying to her, and she had a hard time believing I would ever be able to stay married and monogamous and a father and all those things. For the first year and a half we were together that was what we battled over almost weekly," he tells Playboy magazine in a candid interview. "I just loved to get f—ed-up — drinking, cocaine, opiates, marijuana, diet pills, pain pills, everything. Mostly my love was Jack Daniel's and cocaine."

Monica Lewinsky

Lewinsky cashes in on sexy letters

Fourteen years after revelations of her affair with Bill Clinton rocked the White House, Monica Lewinsky is reportedly telling all with the publication of her love letters to the then-president, according to Page Six.

The former White House intern was paid $12 million for the letters, sources say.

"In them, she opened her heart about her love for Bill and how much happier she could make him," a source says.

"Some of what she wrote was so raw that she never sent them."

This is one of the most beautiful and delicious recipes to serve. Use a variety of coloured tortillas to make it even more spectacular. When this dish is cut open to expose the tomato sauce, vegetables and cheese, it looks amazing.

1. Preheat oven to 350 F. Lightly coat a 9-inch springform pan with cooking spray.

2. Lightly coat a non-stick saucepan with vegetable oil and set over medium heat. Add the corn and sauté, stirring often, for about 8 minutes or until slightly charred. Set aside.

3. Add oil to saucepan and keep over medium heat. Add the onion and garlic and cook for 4 minutes, stirring occasionally. Stir in the red and green peppers. Cook for 3 minutes, stirring occasionally. Stir in the tomato sauce, charred corn, basil, chili powder and cumin. Cover and cook over medium heat, stirring occasionally, for 10 minutes or until slightly thickened. Remove from the heat.

4. Place the chickpeas in a bowl and mash them roughly with a fork. Add to the vegetable mixture and stir to combine.

5. In a separate bowl, combine ricotta, mozzarella and cheddar cheeses (but reserve 1/4 cup of the cheddar for garnish). Add the milk and salt and pepper and stir until well combined.

6. Place a tortilla in the prepared springform pan. Spread with one quarter of the vegetable-chickpea mixture. Sprinkle with one quarter of the cheese mixture. Repeat the layers 3 times. Top with the final tortilla and sprinkle with the remaining cheddar cheese and the Parmesan cheese. Cover the pan tightly with foil.

7. Bake for 20 minutes in the preheated oven, then uncovered for 10 minutes or until it is completely heated through and the cheese has melted. Cut into 8 wedges with a sharp knife.

When you grow up in Nova Scotia, you quickly come to realize that a few things are pretty much a given. 1) You must own Anne Murray's Greatest Hits. 2) Even on a bad day, you have to be friendly to tourists. 3) You're born with a love of fresh seafood.

As a bluenoser, I was brought up on more than just lobster. Scallops and mussels were a menu regular at my house. Sadly, the one mollusk that eluded me as a kid was oyster.

Now that I can eat what I want, I like nothing better than to shuck my way through a dozen or so of our country's amazing oyster output over a glass of one of the many wines that pair so well with them.

If you're up for the classics, a dry French Chablis, Muscadet or anything with champagne in its name is a marriage made in heaven.

A modern take on the perfect pairing is any vino made from sauvignon blanc. New Zealand makes rock solid versions with the Whitehaven 2010 Marlborough Sauvignon Blanc ($17.99 - $19.99), a citrus-infused wonder that plays so well with oysters when both meet in your mouth.

European exodus not all rosy, IIHF head says

NHL lockout. 'Integrity of game' should come before short-term business gains: Fasel

The flow of star players to European teams during the NHL lockout could distort national competitions, International Ice Hockey Federation president Rene Fasel said Thursday.

Fasel told The Associated Press that he balanced the increased attention for European hockey against potential damage to the integrity of leagues, especially if players return to North America mid-season.

"It's questionable how fair it is to the others (teams) and the whole league system," Fasel said by telephone from Tokyo, where the governing body has its congress next week.

"The integrity of the game is, for us, something very important. It's not just business," the world hockey leader said. "We play the game for the hockey fans, but sport should always be No. 1. Sport should also be about fairness to everybody."

Since the lockout started, players have turned to Europe to find playing time and salaries until the stalemate between the league and NHL players' union is resolved.

Fasel said it is good for fans to see stars come home, including two-time MVP Alex Ovechkin to Russian club Dynamo Moscow and New York Islanders captain Mark Streit with Switzerland's best-supported club, Bern.

"That is very positive, there's no doubt," said Fasel, a former Swiss league referee. "Mark Streit never played in Switzerland when he was a junior. Now he can come back and play for a top team as a big star — that's a great story."

Still, Fasel acknowledged mixed feelings.

"You have to pay the insurance (for salaries) and we know most of the clubs have troubles with their budgets, so they should be careful," he said. "There are some teams in Switzerland that will never be able to pay half a million and more to hire these guys."

Lions defensive lineman not showing any signs of remorse ahead of big rematch; Riders have to focus on more than just Cornish; Bombers' misery no laughing matter

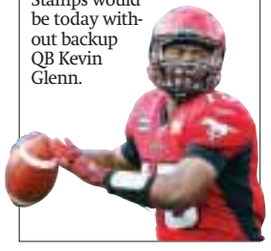
Photos by The Canadian Press/Torstar News Service

Mitchell on way to Edmonton

Sadly, what goes around doesn't always come around and B.C. Lion Khalif Mitchell is sounding anything but contrite as he gets ready to face Simeon Rottier and the Eskimos on Saturday. It's a rematch of a July game when Mitchell purposely wrenched Rottier's arm into a mangled mess, receiving a two-game ban.

Glenn keeping Stamps afloat

Jon Cornish has to be the Stamps nominee for Outstanding Player this season, with 880 yards rushing and a chance to be the first Canadian back to claim the rushing title in more than two decades. That said, imagine where the 7-4 Stamps would be today without backup QB Kevin Glenn.



Cornish not only concern for Riders

Riders coach Corey Chamblin created a stir this by indicating someone would lose his job if Jon Cornish posts a 100-yard game against the Riders this Sunday in Regina. Cornish rumbled for 159 yards against the Riders a couple of weeks ago, but so much focus on him could open up opportunities for Calgary in other offensive areas.

Round and round in Edmonton

You have to think the Eskimos offence is taking sides in the locker-room as Kavis Reed spins the wheel of fortune to choose his starting quarterback. Reed has announced that former No. 1 pivot Steven Jyles is back in the hotseat after temporarily losing his job to backup Kerry Joseph.

Burke gets tough with lousy club

It's OK for all of us to laugh at the sad-sack Bombers, but head coach Tim Burke has made it painfully clear it's not alright for the players to get their chuckles on the sidelines. Burke was brutally honest in reprimanding his players for lacking maturity and not giving enough effort last weekend in Calgary.

Ticats looking good all around

Hamilton fans have to be hoping that last week's 43-point win over Edmonton was a glimpse of the real Tiger-Cats. Henry Burris and the offence was dominant, while the defence completely shut down the Esks. The Tabbies couldn't wish for a better matchup as they travel to Winnipeg.

CFL. D the key as Riders prepare for Stampeders

The Saskatchewan Roughriders are looking to their defence for a win Sunday against the Calgary Stampeders.

"Our job is to keep them out of the end zone, our job is to minimize their gains and control the other team's offence," said Riders defensive co-ordinator Richie Hall.

In recent weeks, Riders hype has largely focused on quarterback Darian Durant's health and backup Drew Willy's preparedness. This changed Wednesday when head coach Corey Chamblin made a substantial defensive promise to fans.

"Jon Cornish (Stampeders running back) better not get over 100 yards rushing. If he does, someone won't be back on that field come next week," he said.

Hall supported the Chamblin guarantee on Thursday.

"We can't allow a football team, especially Calgary, to control us by the run," said Hall. "To be a good defensive team you have to be able to take away their run and make the other team one dimensional."

Kick off for the Stamps and Riders showdown is at 2 p.m. on Sunday at Mosaic Stadium.

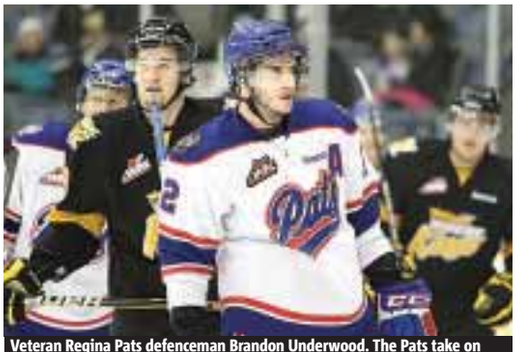
Pats season gets started with home-and-home vs. Brandon



Veteran Regina Pats defenceman Brandon Underwood. The Pats take on the Wheat Kings in Brandon on Friday, followed by the Pats' home opener at the Brandt Centre on Saturday. THE REGINA PATS HOCKEY CLUB/CONTRIBUTED

The Pats are looking to build on last year's modest success, and winning the away portion of their home-and-home in Brandon on Friday would put them on the right track in meeting their goal.

The two teams return to Regina for the Pats' home opener on Saturday at 7 p.m. to conclude the two-game series.

The Pats offence will be interesting to watch this season. Jordan Weal, a staple of the Pats offence for years, is currently in prospect limbo as the NHL lockout has impeded a big push to make the jump to the pros.

Looking to fill Weal's shoes are Washington Capitals draft pick Chandler Stephenson and Pats veteran Lane Scheidl. Pat fans should also keep an eye on forward Morgan Klimchuk. The 2011 fifth-overall draft pick can be an offensive dynamo, and will likely get more playing time this season.

The Wheat Kings will be a different team this season; they've lost their top three scorers from 2011-12. They should find some consistency, however, in offensive defencemen Ryan Pulock and Eric Roy. The pair knocked in 30 goals and 113 points last season.

MLB. A's show blowout power to take finale in Detroit

Seth Smith celebrates his home run with his A's teammates on Thursday in Detroit. GETTY IMAGES

Seth Smith homered, doubled and drove in four runs, and the Oakland Athletics avoided a three-game sweep by beating the Detroit Tigers 12-4 Thursday in a matchup of AL playoff contenders.

Both teams began the day in second place in their divisions, and Oakland held an edge in the wild-card race. The Tigers fell 2 1/2 games behind the Central-leading Chicago White Sox, who played later at Kansas City.

Outscored 18-4 in the first two games, Oakland held down Miguel Cabrera to win the finale. Cabrera singled in four at-bats, and tops the AL in batting at .333.

Scoring in bunches

NFL. Offences having their way as 1,556 points scored through first two weeks

With last year's lockout a distant memory, defences had a full off-season to better prepare for the league's high-octane offences. Yet, the NFL's mighty scoring machine roars on.

Teams have combined for 1,556 points so far, the most ever scored over a two-week span in league history.

"I guess it's good for people's fantasy teams," said Detroit Lions defensive end Cliff Avril.

Last year, there were 1,502 points scored over the first two weeks on the heels of the lockout that ended just in time for a crash course in training camp. This year, teams had all off-season, if fewer padded practices, to gel.

Not that it's paid off for defences.

The rules and regulations that govern pro football have long tilted toward offence, resulting in an aerial fireworks show that's good for ratings — of both the television and quarterback variety.

Add to that an eruption this season of spread offences and the no-huddle and you get panting pass-rushers and mismatches with smaller defenders trapped on the field to face towering tight ends and taller receivers who no longer think twice about going over the middle, certain they'll get the ball or the call.

Delivering those pinpoint passes are ever sharper quarterbacks. Six passers so far own a completion percentage of 70 per cent or better, led by Minnesota's Christian Ponder at 75.8 per cent, and four more quarterbacks are within an eyelash of that lofty new benchmark.

The overall completion percentage so far is 62.6 per cent. The NFL record for a season is 61.2 per cent, set in 2007, according to STATS LLC.

"What this league has turned into is a spread 'em out passing league," said New York Jets defensive lineman Mike DeVito.

Three yards and a cloud of dust is out.

Now, it's more like 15 yards and move the chains.

"That's what fans want to see: 'Oh my God, he had 187 receiving yards.' They don't want to see, 'Man, the defence held them to 67 yards the whole game,"' said Chiefs cornerback Stanford Routt. "They want to see running backs and wide receivers dancing in the end zone." THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

UFC 152. 'He knows he can't win': Bisping stirs the pot with Stann

English middleweight Michael 'The Count' Bisping stole the show at the UFC 152 news conference Thursday, jamming his face into opponent Brian 'All American' Stann as the two posed for photos.

Bisping and Stann stood nose-to-nose, then the Brit leaned forward and edged his forehead into the American's face. Stann moved back a step and then stood his ground, their eyes locked.

When they broke the pose, Stann paused before being the first to put out his hand and they shook.

But the former marine war hero did not remain with Bisping for a secondary pose for photos. Instead, clearly not happy, Stann glared at the English fighter from the side of the stage while a smirking Bisping took centre stage alone to adopt a fighting stance.

Bisping added some trash talk later in the day.

"He put his nose against mine and it was like an Eskimo kiss, so I pressed my forehead again his," Bisping said. "I saw all the macho-ness drain out of him like someone had pulled a plug in a bath. He looked like a little girl who had got separated from her parents at Disneyland and has wet herself, and was all alone and scared.

"He knows he can't win this fight. He probably called home right away and said 'Honey, I'm not getting a win bonus. Hold off on ordering that new kitchen.'" THE CANADIAN PRESS

Revis cleared for contact in practice for Jets

Darrelle Revis is back in action for the New York Jets.

The All-Pro cornerback was cleared Thursday for contact in practice for the first time since suffering a concussion in the team's season opener. And, as far as Revis is concerned, there's no doubt whether he'll be on the field against the Dolphins in Miami.

"I'm playing," Revis said after practice. "The doctors cleared me, so I'll be playing Sunday."

He has no more restrictions, and just to show how ready he is, Revis jokingly added: "I can bang my head on a wall if I want to."

Coach Rex Ryan was also optimistic about Revis' chances of playing Sunday, but said before practice that he'll lean on the team's doctors before saying the cornerback will definitely be on the field in Miami. "If it's not the final hurdle, I don't want to be saying something that isn't true," Ryan said.

Revis practised fully Thursday after passing all required tests. He needed to be cleared by the team physician and an independent neurologist to participate in contact drills. Revis was injured Sept. 9 against Buffalo when he was accidentally kicked in the head by teammate Bart Scott while attempting a tackle.

The cornerback said he didn't need to be re-evaluated after practice since he was cleared medically, so barring a setback, Revis will be back in the Jets' secondary on Sunday.

"I think you feel good when you have the best player on the field," Ryan said. "That can't hurt you. ... There's only one Darrelle Revis. I know I feel great about it. It's hard not to smile if he's out there. You feel great as a playcaller." THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

Missing from action

Without Revis on the field, the Jets allowed Ben Roethlisberger to throw for 275 yards and two touchdowns. He also had a passer rating of 125.1.

- New York (1-1) will take on AFC East-rival Miami (1-1) this week

Horoscopes

♈ Aries
March 21 - April 20
You may come under a lot of pressure today but you have always been the sort who knows how to raise your game when the heat is on, so you'll do OK. But try not to put any friendships at risk.

♉ Taurus
April 21 - May 21
The only way you are going to get things done, and get them done right, over the next 24 hours is if you do them yourself. Fortunately, with your ruler Venus on good terms with Jupiter, you won't lack enthusiasm.

♊ Gemini
May 22 - June 21
You may be entirely in the right but be wary of starting a feud with someone who may, in the long-term, prove stronger and more ruthless than you. Maybe this time it would be wise to back down.

♋ Cancer
June 22 - July 23
You seemed determined to put yourself to the test, to prove that you have what it takes. But who are you trying to impress: yourself or other people? If it's the latter, you need to change your outlook a little.

♌ Leo
July 24 - Aug. 23
Because you are trying to do several tasks at once, things have begun to go wrong. But, being the stubborn sort, you refuse to change. Do you really want to end up further away from your goals than when you started?

♍ Virgo
Aug. 24 - Sept. 23
Your eagerness to succeed could lead you to show your hand too soon and make it easy for rivals to work out what you are trying to do. Don't tell anyone, not even friends, what they don't need to know.

♎ Libra
Sept. 24 - Oct. 23
Avoid petty disputes today. With your ruling planet Venus on good terms with big-hearted Jupiter, the last thing you want is to get caught up in other people's squabbles. Your sights are set on bigger and better things.

♏ Scorpio
Oct. 24 - Nov. 22
You will go over the top in some way today but somehow it will all come right for you — which may be a huge surprise. Both financially and professionally, it seems you can do no wrong at the moment.

♐ Sagittarius
Nov. 23 - Dec. 21
Just because other people are going to extremes does not mean you have to do the same. In fact ,the planets warn that if you go too far today, in any direction, you will regret it over the weekend. Play it safe.

♑ Capricorn
Dec. 22 - Jan. 20
You don't have to be assertive, or even aggressive, to get what you desire. Venus and Jupiter come together in such a way that you can quite easily persuade others to give it to you. Don't abuse the situation though.

♒ Aquarius
Jan. 21 - Feb. 19
Something unexpected will happen over the next 24 hours and it will be the kind of something you enjoy. Most likely a relationship will move to a higher level. Suddenly you are on the same wavelength.

♓ Pisces
Feb. 20 - March 20
With Jupiter, planet of excess, strong in your chart there is a possibility that you will take the kind of risk that is best avoided. On the other hand, if you don't take a risk how will you progress? It's your choice.
